Anita Sandberg

Scott Richardson

About the Exhibition:

Through the lens of photography and the expressive language of abstraction, Scott Richardson and Anita Sandberg present an exhibition that celebrates the powerful connection between their creative practices. Rooted in collaboration, mutual inspiration, and a shared passion for artistic exploration, their work invites audiences to discover unexpected connections between reality and imagination.

About the Artists:

Anita Sandberg is a Finnish born designer turned abstract painter who explores textures, color and scale in compositions inspired by the natural environment. Her process involves multiple works produced simultaneously sharing a similar palette and varied techniques. Thus, movement and spontaneity are hallmarks of her work.

Scott Richardson is an architect and cofounder of GRLA. He has been an avid photographer for decades and remembers his early days in the darkroom at the Boston Architectural College. While much of his photography is focused on architecture, his eye for nature and composition is evident in his work. He captures light and its contrast in his subjects and creates abstract images through movement.

Entry to view the exhibition is always free. The HCA is pleased to offer private and group docent tours upon request. For more details, call 508-435-9222 or visit our website at www.hopartscenter.org

About Hopkinton Center for the Art:

- Vision: The region's cultural destination—where passions emerge and the creative spirit thrives.
- Mission: Serving individuals of all ages, cultures, and artistic abilities across the MetroWest region, the HCA develops artistic skills, offers outstanding performances and art exhibitions, and enables visitors to experience art in all forms. Under one roof, we celebrate art through classes and events in visual art, theater, music, dance, ceramics, writing, and film.

About the Lotvin Family Gallery: Learn about art and learn through art—at any age. Look, imagine, discuss, write, and make. The Lotvin Family Gallery is a space where contemporary art and learning meet. We believe that artists are educators, cultural workers, researchers, public intellectuals, and activists who help us see ourselves and the world in new ways.
